

THINK ABOUT COURSEWORK IN AREAS OUTSIDE PSYCHOLOGY

Considering a future business career?

- Management (CSOM minor)
- Economics
- Journalism/Mass Communications
- Speech Communications
- Language Studies
- Statistics
- Urban Studies
- Accounting
- Human Resources
- Marketing
- Business Administration

Considering a career in technical writing, publishing or editing?

- Journalism
- Rhetoric
- Communications
- English/English composition

Considering a career in research?

- Biological sciences
- Ecological sciences
- Math

- statistics

Considering a career in computers?

- Computer science (programming and system design, user interface or webpage design.)
- Computer Engineering
- Information Networking

Considering a career in human services?

- Sociology
- Social Work
- Family Social Science
- Youth Studies
- Educational Psychology
- Child Psychology
- Teaching English as a 2nd Language

Considering a future government?

- Urban Studies
- Political Science

Considering a career in language & cultural studies?

- Afro-American Studies
- American Indian Studies
- Hispanic Studies

- Hmong Studies
- Asian Languages & Culture
- Central Asian Studies
- Developmental Studies and social change
- East Asian Studies
- GLBT studies

Core Options Outside the Major

Course work in music, art, and recreation pertinent to therapeutic uses of these disciplines is valuable.

Courses which prepare you to use psychological tests, interview techniques, or research design can supplement your resume. Check the College of Education & Human Development in addition to the Department of Psychology for opportunities.

Participate in independent study, research, or field work. Field placements and research assignments often lead directly to job opportunities in similar settings after graduation. (Additionally, in such activities a professor or professional psychologist may act as a referral to a potential employer!)